Duration: 2 Day

Moving from a functional role into a strategic business partnering position involves much more than a change in job title. It requires a different mindset, a broader organisational perspective, and a more deliberate approach to building relationships and influencing outcomes.

Business Partnering is a two-day immersive programme designed to help participants build trusted relationships, strengthen collaboration, and create sustainable value across their organisation.

The course focuses on stakeholder engagement, empathy-led communication, influence, decision-making, change management, and the long-term maintenance of effective partnerships. Participants learn how to work through organisational complexity, reduce silos between teams, and develop stronger alignment around shared objectives.

Whether you are moving into a business partnering role for the first time or looking to strengthen an existing approach, this programme provides practical tools and strategic insight to help you create higher-impact partnerships across your organisation.

Prerequisites

There are no formal prerequisites for attending this course.

However, participants are likely to gain additional value if they have previously completed a psychometric assessment or already have a clear understanding of their personal strengths and development areas.

Where available, participants are encouraged to bring any relevant behavioural, personality, or strengths-based assessment results to the workshop. These can help make the learning experience more personally relevant.

Who Should Attend

This course is particularly suitable for:

- Professionals who work with internal or external stakeholders to achieve organisational objectives
- People Partners, HR Business Partners, and professionals in similar partnering roles
- Cross-functional leaders and project leads
- Professionals who want to improve collaboration, influence, and relationship management skills
- Individuals who need to influence others without relying on formal authority
